4	The effects of religion on society If the interaction between religion and society is examined closely and systematically, it is seen that this is mainly in the form of the effect of religion on the community. Social structure and social functions are exposed to this effect. For this reason, religion has always been in close relationship with natural communities such as family, tribe, and nation. According to sociologists of religion, the effect of religion on traditions is far greater than the effects seen: When religions are powerful, they make great efforts to change societies, especially when they first appeared. Because, in these periods, their leaders were at the head of the religion. During these early years of religion, great social changes and transformations take place. When the influence of religion on society begins to weaken; the power of religions to change society also slows down. In this case, society is already trying to change religion and dominate it. Kililç, Ahmet Faruk, "The Religion of the Community's (All Religious Sociology)", Kutup Yildiz Yayinlari, Istanbul, 2014: 108-119.
5	The social functions of religion Religion and Social Integration, The Role of Religion in Solving Today's Social Problems The roles of religion in social integration Religion, religious movements, radicalism, extremism, terrorism and war Religion not only in the French Revolution, but also in times of other crises has always shown its integrative functions. Religious references have always been used not only during the war, but also for the public acceptance of post-war reforms. Religion has always been the most important integrating factor in the creation and development stages of many states living in the past and today. But it has often happened that politics uses religion for its own interests, inciting wars, conflicts and terror. In these times the positive role of feta leadership in promoting peace and dialogue increases. An Islamic Perspective on Terror, Prizmi, Tirana, 2008. Kililç, Ahmet Faruk, "The Religion of the Community's (All Religious Sociology)", Kutup Yildiz Yayinlari, Istanbul, 2014: 119-132.
6	Sociological analysis of religion by Albanian thinkers The need for religion in spiritual, moral, legal and social terms Philosophers who always explain the movements of matter or spirits, caused on the surface of the earth according to religious facts, determine the need for faith for man with these words: The soul is an invisible globe. And this sphere that our eyes see is weak and, in a part of this sphere, our body also enters. Kraja, Ali, "Should religion, does it hinder national unity", KMSH, Tirana 2016: 20-47.
7	Dialogue, a global necessity The basic values that are features of the century. XXI are modernism, pluralism, individualism, etc. Some claim that modernity has unified personal and social life, creating new forms of religious, cultural, and political pluralism. Many theorists have described modernity from the perspective of increasing human sovereignty beyond its borders and advancing science. This direct link established between science, on the one hand, and sovereignty skills, on the other, has shown the opportunity given to more powerful states to practice new forms of domination of other countries and peoples, which in times modern have brought numerous problematic consequences. Ergene, Enes, Love and Tolerance, Prizmi, Tirana, 2005: 9. Smith, Jane I., Jane Idleman Smith, Muslims, Christians, and the challenge of interfaith dialogue, Oxford University Press, 2007: 101-120.
8	Meeting for project
9	Dialogue, tolerance and understanding Tolerance, a term we use from time to time instead of the words respect, mercy, generosity or self-control, is the most essential element for moral systems, the most important source of spiritual discipline, and a very precious virtue for self-fulfilling human beings. People generally want to refer to the past and present for the climate of tolerance and patience that disperses, transforms, clarifies and purifies. Then walk towards the future with confidence, without any feeling of anxiety. Kruja, Genti, Albanians in the face of the challenges of interfaith understanding, Prizmi, Tirana, 2008: 24-39; Gulen, Fethullah, Love and tolerance, Prizmi, Tirana, 2005: 115-117.

10	Interfaith dialogue in Abrahamic (monotheistic) beliefs The issue of dealing with interfaith harmony and coexistence between believers of different religious faiths is a fundamental and necessary topic for people. Talking about the issue of interfaith tolerance is like talking about life in theory and practice. Tolerance of a religion is a criterion of its vital ability. The more noble the provisions of a religion, the greater will be its predisposition to become a universal religion, a religion of the human race. Making a world religion is again the ideal of any religion, which aims to give the human community comfort and peace in this world and eternal happiness in the next. The relationship between Islam and Christianity The most important influence of European thought in the Muslim world dates back to the early nineteenth century, as Islamic civilization had made its profound impact on European Christian culture - its long road to development and technology - for nearly a thousand years. before and over a period of several hundred years. In other words, for more than a thousand years European culture did not have a very significant impact on the Muslim world, moreover it benefited from the early Islamic "enlightenment" in all fields of culture and science. Kruja, Genti, Albanians in the face of the challenges of interfaith understanding, Prizmi, Tirana, 2008:: 70-80, 91; Kahraman, Ahmet, Historical Religious History, Marifet Zazinlari, Istanbul 1999: 50, 141-335.
11	Interfaith Dialogue in Islam Examples and interpretations from the Qur'an Tolerance in the prophetic tradition Dialogue between Muslims and Orthodox The relationship between Muslims and Eastern Christians is as early as Islam itself. They dialogue in different ways because they coexisted in the same geographical areas, where Eastern Christianity lay, as in Palestine, Egypt, Syria and Asia Minor. Dialogue between Muslims and the Vatican • Vatican Council II • Letter from Muslim leaders to the Pope and all Christian Churches • Marrakesh Declaration on the Rights of Religious Minorities in Muslim Countries • Thomas Michel, an example of dialogue Pontifical Council for Inter-religious Dialogue and the Congregation, "Dialogue and Proclamation." 1-22, 33-41, 46-54. Skim 55-89. Online Link Kruja, Genti, Albanians in the face of the challenges of interfaith understanding, Prizmi, Tirana, 2008: 90-93, 119-130. Anastasi, Globalism and Orthodoxy, KOASH, Tirana, 2004: 147.
12	Challenges of interfaith coexistence between Muslims and Christians throughout history Both civilizations are based on belief in one God. Monotheism is the essence of their faith. The concept of Islam for God can help Christians clarify their conception of monotheism and critically evaluate the anthropomorphic elements in their dogma of the trinity of the one God. Moreover, both faiths have a universal nature and are therefore open to all mankind. This universality of their message may constitute a rivalry between the two faiths, but at the same time underlines the lack of prejudice against all the beliefs of mankind. Globalization of relations between Muslims and Christians The movement towards a worldwide community constitutes an evolving event, a clear historical "situation" that takes place regardless of our desires or oppositions and is accelerated by factors that are neutral and indifferent to religion. In this process different religions have played a very important role, direct or indirect, positive or inhibitory. Therefore, before referring to the future contribution of religions to the obligation, which they have associated with the formation of the worldwide community, it is necessary to recognize their responsibility in many gloomy pages of human history and to understand the new framework, within which they are bound to move. Anastasi, Globalism and Orthodoxy, KOASH, Tirana, 2004: 23; Kruja, Genti, Albanians in the face of the challenges of interfaith understanding, Prizmi, Tirana, 2008: 80.
13	Albanians face the challenges of interfaith understanding In the Albanian sociological studies of the last decade it has been argued that in addition to the cultural value of faith and hospitality, tolerance, or, more precisely, interfaith understanding of Albanians constituted and constitutes one of the most prominent profiles of psychocultural modeling of Albanians in the past and in our days. Meanwhile, in many more urbanized societies, over the centuries, even today, interreligious conflicts have been and continue to be a serious problematic challenge on many levels, social and political, religious and psychocultural, etc. Kruja, Genti, "Albanians in the face of the challenges of interfaith understanding", Prizmi, Tirana, 2008: 131-239.
14	Religious diversity throughout history in Albanian lands History of religious communities in Albania Religion and Albania in the time of socialist realism Communist persecution and the challenges of cultural diversity during the totalitarian regime.
15	Road to interfaith dialogue today in Albania Examples and practices of interfaith academic dialogue The role of religious communities in promoting interfaith dialogue The role of the state and relations with religious communities.
