Lecturer Indrit Lami, Msc Lecturer Assistant Course language English Course level Bachelor "Language and Culture" is a dynamic and comprehensive course that delves into the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences over seven in collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language – both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts – and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, and cultural arratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between Language and Identity. Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity. Exploring in Current Debates: C	Course Name	: Language	and Culture
Lecturer Indrit Lami, Msc Assistant Course language English Course level Bachelor "Language and Culture" is a dynamic and comprehensive course that delves into the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language – both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts – and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, ediving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural anaratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between Language and Identity. Exploring the complex relationship	Course Code			(hours/we	(hours/we	(hours/we	Credits	ECTS
Course language Course level Bachelor "Language and Culture" is a dynamic and comprehensive course that delves into the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language - both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts - and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verba actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, delving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural narratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between language and cultural identity; Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity,	ELL 251	С	Fall	3.00	0.00	0.00	3.00	5.00
Course language Course level Bachelor "Language and Culture" is a dynamic and comprehensive course that delves into the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language - both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts - and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verba actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, delving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural narratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between language and cultural identity; Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity,
Course language Course level Bachelor "Language and Culture" is a dynamic and comprehensive course that delves into the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language - both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts - and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, delving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural narratives. 5. Exploring the lmpact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between language and identity; Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity, caminin		Lecturer	Indrit Lami, Msc
Tanguage and Culture" is a dynamic and comprehensive course that delves into the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language – both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts – and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, ediving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structure and cultural narratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between Language and cultural Every Every and Identity. Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity, examining how languag		Assistant
"Language and Culture" is a dynamic and comprehensive course that delves into the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary too'r social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language – both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts – and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, delving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural natives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between Language and Identity: Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity, examining how language serves as a symbolic repres	Cour	rse language	English
the intricate interplay between language and culture and their profound impact or communication. This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced understanding of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and is deeply entwined with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven interconnected chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language shapes social dynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and collective identities. This course provides a platform for students to explore the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an appreciation for the ways in which language shapes our social world and influences our understanding of self and others. 1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language – both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts – and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, delving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural narratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between Language and Identity. Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity, examining how language and culture in language surves as a symbolic representation of self and community. 7. Engaging in C		Course level	Bachelor foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language – both as encoded signs and as a actions within specific contexts – and its implications for cultural representation. 3 Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, delving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural narratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between Language and Identity: Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity, examining how language serves as a symbolic representation of self and community. 7. Engaging in Current Debates: Critically engaging with contemporary debates surrounding language and culture in language studies, addressing issues related to the native speaker, cultural authenticity, and multicultural communication. Core Concepts Core Concepts Core Concepts Course Outline	the intricate int communication understanding is deeply entwi interconnected shapes social d collective ident richness and co appreciation fo			erplay between language and culture and their profound impact on This course is designed to provide students with a nuanced of how language serves as a primary tool for social interaction and ned with cultural contexts. By exploring key aspects over seven chapters, students will gain insights into the ways language ynamics, creates cultural meaning, and influences personal and ties. This course provides a platform for students to explore the mplexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, fostering an the ways in which language shapes our social world and
Construction, Oral and Written Mediums, Print Technology Impact, Cultural Identity, Contemporary Debates, Linguistic and Cultural Diversity, Semantics and Pragmatics, Social Construction of Meaning, Complexity of Identity. Course Outline	Objectives		1. Understanding Foundational Connections: Gaining a solid understanding of the foundational relationship between language and culture, exploring how language both expresses and shapes cultural realities. 2. Analyzing Meaning in Language: Exploring the dual nature of meaning in language – both as encoded signs and as actions within specific contexts – and its implications for cultural representation. 3. Examining Cultural Meaning Construction: Investigating how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions, drawing inspiration from literary and philosophical perspectives. 4. Comparing Oral and Written Mediums: Examining the differences between spoken and written language, delving into how each medium contributes to the construction of social structures and cultural narratives. 5. Exploring the Impact of Print Technology: Investigating the transformative impact of writing and print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and the broader dynamics of power and representation. 6. Understanding the Complex Link between Language and Identity: Exploring the complex relationship between language and cultural identity, examining how language serves as a symbolic representation of self and community. 7. Engaging in Current Debates: Critically engaging with contemporary debates surrounding language and culture in language studies, addressing issues related to the native
	Core Concepts		Construction, Oral and Written Mediums, Print Technology Impact, Cultural Identity, Contemporary Debates, Linguistic and Cultural Diversity, Semantics and
Week Topic	Course Outline
	Week				Торіс

1	The relationship of language and culture The relationship between language and culture is intricate and multi-faceted. Language serves as the primary tool for social interaction, intimately connected with culture in various ways. Furthermore, communities and social groups not only express their experiences through language but also actively create meaning. Language, being a system of signs, holds cultural value as a symbol of social identity. Individuals identify themselves and others through language, viewing it as a representation of their cultural belonging. The three key aspects of the relationship between language and culture involve expressing shared experiences, actively creating meaning through communication, and recognizing language as a symbolic representation of social identity. These aspects will be explored further in the context of the book, emphasizing the need to clarify the concept of culture. (Pages 4-14)
2	Meaning as sign (Part 1) Language can mean in two fundamental ways, both of which are intimately linked to culture: through what it says or what it refers to as an encoded sign (semantics), and through what it does as an action in context (pragmatics). We consider in this chapter how language means as an encoded sign. (Pages 15-24)
3	Meaning as sign (Part 2) Language can mean in two fundamental ways, both of which are intimately linked to culture: through what it says or what it refers to as an encoded sign (semantics), and through what it does as an action in context (pragmatics). We consider in this chapter how language means as an encoded sign. (Pages 15-24)
4	Meaning as action (Part 1) After years of searching in vain for the meaning of life in philosophy, law, and theology, Goethe's Dr. Faust decides that meaning is not in words, but in actions. The famous statement in the Bible 'In the beginning was the Word' needs to be replaced, he says, by a statement more appropriate to modern times. 'In the beginning was Action!' he exclaims, and he sells his soul to the Devil. If he does get saved in the end, it is for having accepted that all action is contingent upon the time and place in which it unfolds. 'Meaning is never achieved once and for all, it must be conquered anew in_every utterance through the verbal actions and interactions of speakers and hearers, writers, and readers, In this chapter we consider the way in which cultural meaning is created through the actions and interactions of speakers in social contexts. (Pages 25-36)
5	Meaning as action (Part 2) After years of searching in vain for the meaning of life in philosophy, law, and theology, Goethe's Dr. Faust decides that meaning is not in words, but in actions. The famous statement in the Bible 'In the beginning was the Word' needs to be replaced, he says, by a statement more appropriate to modern times. 'In the beginning was Action!' he exclaims, and he sells his soul to the Devil. If he does get saved in the end, it is for having accepted that all action is contingent upon the time and place in which it unfolds. 'Meaning is never achieved once and for all, it must be conquered anew in every utterance through the verbal actions and interactions of speakers and hearers, writers, and readers, In this chapter we consider the way in which cultural meaning is created through the actions and interactions of speakers in social contexts. (Pages 25-36)
6	Spoken language, oral culture (Part 1) In this chapter and the next we explore further how social structure is con- structed through the two very different media of speech and writing. The spoken medium is directly linked to the time of its enunciation and to the perception by those present of the transient dimensions of the verbal event. By contrast, the technology of writing, as a spatial extension of the mind and the hand, has been able to overcome the ephemeral, auditory nature of spoken language by translating it into more permanent, visible signs on a page. We first discuss the differences between the two media. (Pages 37-52)
7	Spoken language, oral culture (Part 2) In this chapter and the next we explore further how social structure is con- structed through the two very different media of speech and writing. The spoken medium is directly linked to the time of its enunciation and to the perception by those present of the transient dimensions of the verbal event. By contrast, the technology of writing, as a spatial extension of the mind and the hand, has been able to overcome the ephemeral, auditory nature of spoken language by translating it into more permanent, visible signs on a page. We first discuss the differences between the two media. (Pages 37-52)
8	Mid-term exam
9	Print language, literate culture (Part 1) The technology of writing and print technology have over time not only changed the medium of language use, but irrevocably changed our way of thinking and talking about culture. This chapter will deal with issues of text, power, and the cultural politics of literacy. (Pages 53-64)

10	Print language, literate culture (Part 2) The technology of writing and print technology have over time not only changed the medium of language use, but irrevocably changed our way of thinking and talking about culture. This chapter will deal with issues of text, power, and the cultural politics of literacy. (Pages 53-64)
11	Language and cultural identity (Part 1) This chapter will help us bring together several notions that have emerged in the previous chapters; the motivated, non-arbitrary nature of the linguistic sign, the link between a language and its legitimate discourse community, the symbolic capital associated with the use of a particular language or of a literate form of that language, in short, the association of language with a person's sense of self. We explore in this chapter the complex relationship between language and what is currently called 'cultural identity'. (Pages 65-78)
12	Language and cultural identity (Part 2) This chapter will help us bring together several notions that have emerged in the previous chapters; the motivated, non-arbitrary nature of the linguistic sign, the link between a language and its legitimate discourse community, the symbolic capital associated with the use of a particular language or of a literate form of that language, in short, the association of language with a person's sense of self. We explore in this chapter the complex relationship between language and what is currently called 'cultural identity'. (Pages 65-78)
13	Current issues (Part 1) The relationship of language and culture in language study is one of the most hotly debated issues at the present time. Because language is closely related to the way we think, and to the way we behave and influence the behaviour of others, the notion that our sense of social reality may be but a construction of language or 'language game' is disturbing. The notion that a person's social and cultural identity may not be the immutable monolithic entity it is usually taken for, but a kaleidoscope of various presentations and representations of self through language, is unsettling. These uncertainties explain in part the current debates surrounding the role of the native speaker, the concept of cultural authenticity, the notions of cross-, inter-, and multicultural communication and what has become known as the politics of recognition (Pages 79-84)
14	Current issues (Part 2) The relationship of language and culture in language study is one of the most hotly debated issues at the present time. Because language is closely related to the way we think, and to the way we behave and influence the behaviour of others, the notion that our sense of social reality may be but a construction of language or 'language game' is disturbing. The notion that a person's social and cultural identity may not be the immutable monolithic entity it is usually taken for, but a kaleidoscope of various presentations and representations of self through language, is unsettling. These uncertainties explain in part the current debates surrounding the role of the native speaker, the concept of cultural authenticity, the notions of cross-, inter-, and multicultural communication and what has become known as the politics of recognition (Pages 79-84)
15	Review
16	Final Exam

	Prerequisites	The student must attend the course at a minimum rate of 75%.
	Literature	• Kramsch Claire J. 2018. Language and Culture 8. Impr ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press.
References • Në lidhje me çdo temë do të ketë literatura të ndryshme cdo javë
Course Outco	ome
1		Understanding: Developing a comprehensive understanding of the intricate ten language and culture.
2	Communication Competence: Acquiring competence in recognizing and navigating the impact of language and culture on communication dynamics.
3	Critical Analysis: Enhancing critical thinking skills to analyze the construction of meaning in language, considering both encoded signs and actions within cultural contexts.
4	Medium Proficiency: Differentiating between oral and written language, understanding their respective roles in constructing social structures.
5	Technology Awareness: Gaining awareness of the transformative impact of print technology on language use, cultural perspectives, and power dynamics.
6	Cultural Identity Awareness: Developing an awareness of the complex relationship between language and cultural identity, recognizing language as a symbolic representation of self and community.
7	Engagement in Debates: Actively engaging in and contributing to contemporary debates surrounding language and culture in language studies.
8	Appreciation for Diversity: Cultivating an appreciation for the richness and complexity of linguistic and cultural diversity, acknowledging the ways language shapes the social world.
9	Semantics and Pragmatics Mastery: Mastering the concepts of semantics (meaning as encoded signs) and pragmatics (meaning as action in context) in language.
10	Meaning Construction Skills: Developing skills in understanding how cultural meaning is actively constructed through verbal actions and interactions in social contexts.
11		ltural Politics Understanding: Understanding the cultural and political implications icularly the cultural politics associated with writing technology.
12	cultural identity	exity Recognition: Recognizing and navigating the complexity of social and v, understanding that it is not a static entity but a dynamic interplay of various hrough language.

Course Evaluation
In-term Studies		Quantity	Percentage
Midterms		1	50
Quizzes		0	0
Projects		0	0
Term Projects		0	0
Laboratory		0	0
Class Participation 0			0
Total in-term evaluation percent
Final exam percent
Total
ECTS Workload (Based on Student Workload)
Activities	Quantity	Duration (hours)	Total (hours)
Course duration (Including the exam week: 16x Total hours of the course)	16	3	48
Study hours outside the classroom (Preparation, Practice, etc.)	14	4	56
Duties	0	0	0
Midterms	1	3	3
Final Exam	1	3	3
Other	1	3	3
Total Work Load
Total Work Load / 25 (hours)
ECTS			5.00	